That's you and your wife and the baby. Just a nice little family, and not one could be spared. Now, if about this time your wife seems a little dull and tired and not quite so "chipper" as she used to be, don't think she means to be fussy. It is probably just because she feels weak and tired out. If you ask her, she won't confess that anything troubles her, but just the same, she undoubtedly has headaches, backaches, dyspepsia or some other symptoms of KIDNEY AND BLADDER TROUBLE. Now, when you go home tonight, step into the druggist's and buy a bottle of

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy for $1.00 and take it home with you. Tell her you know it will do her good and make the baby better, and she will try to please you. After a few doses she will feel so much better that whenever any one of you three don't feel just right, she will be the first one to run to the medicine closet for the Remedy.

It is just as good for a woman or a child as for a man. It is pleasant to take, and will stop at once all the little ailments which are the forerunners of KIDNEY AND BLADDER TROUBLE. Have a bottle in the house anyway.

Drop us a postal for free Booklet A, giving fuller instructions and testimonials.

OXFORD COUNTY ADVERTISER FRIDAY, JUNE 28, 1901.

Written for the Advertiser.

Independence Day.

More throughout our glorious land youth with patriotic life and limb and heart and hand, shout a truce of pallor.

Heedless of the War's alarms, after dangers fade away

Before the carnage we endure Each Independence Day.

Oh, Marion was brave enough, And Washington was true.

Brave Wolf and Warren were all right, But others, "just as warm,"

Are ready for the sacrifice, And for their country's good

Will send strange rockets to the skies, In patriotic mood;

Will squander all their ready cash For giant cannon crackers

And every sound of noise and crash That can amuse and rack us;

With loyal hearts and sturdy limbs, Firm, uncompromising martyrs

All night long will scheme and plan, Inventing ways to "start" us.

Fireworks and firewater are "Hot stuffs" immensely thrilling,

And such a splendid display is More than often killing;

But the heroes of the Revolution, Dead bodies, empty pockets

That have paid for Roman candles And torpedoes and sky-rockets!

The Declaration signers Are entitled to remembrance,

But what need for the sky-rockets? Bears scarcely a resemblance

Endured by their descendants At each annual celebration.

Of their glorious sky-rockets! Then hail the Day, ye patriots, hail!

From ocean unto ocean Let us cry a cheer for Liberty!

Though death may be his portion; With steady hand, courageous eye

By the hand of the hero, The deadly pyrotechnics,

And the Little Toy Pistol! CORA M. W. GREENLEAF.

Can't I offer you any refreshments?" she asked.

He paid no attention, but went on. "I am."

It frightened her that she used that once familiar name.

He looked in at her. "I don't see why you should go like this," she stammered. "I don't see how I have been cruel."

"It is so hard for you to be cruel," he said quietly; "it has always been so easy for me."

She could have cried out. "Are you the sorrier for having seen Helena?" she temporized.

"I am glad of it," he answered. "Could I have told her you were anything but one of the boat hands? Could I have told her you were her mother's first husband?"

"The possibility that there was something you had to tell is what brought me here," he said.

He was in the hall.

"Is there nothing you have to tell me?" he asked. "Nothing at all?"

"No," she answered, "nothing."

He came back and threw himself into the chair before the table. His hat fell to the floor; he let his head rest on his rule scarred hands that were clasped together on the table.

Miss Martha moved softly about the room, arranging and rearranging the things. It was good for him to suffer. When she got to the rose jar, she noiselessly raised the lid. She told herself she did this every day.

His suffering must be intense. She remembered him when his father used to give him money which he wasted. She remembered when he gambled and lied to Margy and neglected her till she had to leave him.

She folded up her sewing, being careful to stick the needle so that it would not come unthreaded.

She went out into the kitchen and got a glass of milk and a few of the cakes she had baked for the picnic. When she came back to the parlor, Borland was as she had left him.

"I thought," she said, "you might like a glass of milk."

He raised his head.

"That was very kind," he said. When she pressed the cakes on him, he took one and laid it beside the glass on the table.

"I think I'll be going," he said. "I only had an hour off. I'm glad I came."

"I'm glad to hear you say so," Miss Martha returned grimly. "I suppose I shall see you again some time. The world is a small place, and we go in a circle."

"Yes," he replied stupidly. Then he faced her. "I am glad you did as you did," he said, "and not let her know I was her mother's first husband. I am glad you did as you did. I've done wrong in many ways in my time, but I think we pay full price for a good deal of what we do in this world. That's sentiment, I suppose, and I don't look very sentimental, do I?"

He looked hungrily into her eyes. "Is there anything you have to tell me—anything?"

She shook her head. He laughed. "Well, goodbye," he said. "Goodbye!"

He went lingeringly from the house as though he hoped there might be a word from her to detain him. But the word was not spoken, and he passed out into the night. His hands were clasped behind him, his eyes directed toward the Tecumseh.

Miss Martha seated herself in the chair he had occupied. She sat there a long time. As in a dream she ate her dinner. After that she ate her dinner. She hoped Helena would not come again; she hoped Mr. Mast would stay away; it was almost as though she resented their possible coming.

Toward night she told herself that the morrow would be a wearying day and that she would do better to take more than the usual amount of rest. So she went up to her room. She paused at the window to look out. She saw the red light of the Tecumseh.

"Was there anything I had to tell him? Margy and he used to talk me over?"

She sat down at the window. She rested her head against the window frame. It grew darker and darker outside, quite dark. The damp smell of night came to her. The sounds in the village close by became less. Raft's tavern let out a couple of roisterers who burst into song and then drifted away toward town. If Raft's tavern was closing, it must be 12 o'clock. In that case she had been looking at the boat light four hours.

The morning was misty. The picknickers said that was all the better for a water trip. The ashway was trodden by happy feet that hurried to the Tecumseh.

Helena stopped at the cottage with her lover.

"Why, auntie," she exclaimed, "have you a headache?"

"I never felt better in all my life," Miss Martha protested.

"I don't believe it," Helena whispered to her lover. "She's afraid I'll be anxious if she owns to the truth. That's the way women are."

"Deceptive," he laughed fondly. "Self-sacrificing," Helena said, giving him a little jab with her parasol.

On the boat the Rev. Mr. Mast awaited Miss Martha. "I think everything will go finely," he said.

Miss Martha nodded vaguely. For the first time she thought that it was rather effeminate in a man to pay so much attention to small details. She hunted up her Sunday school class. They started at 8 o'clock. By noon they were on the bar.

The mist had not lightened, and the sun refused to do more than make the world a great opal.

At 3 o'clock they were out of sight of land, if land could have been sighted in this density, and the Tecumseh was rocking strangely. And at 3 o'clock the captain, with a sudden, tense look, decided that the mist growing heavier, it was scarcely adding to the pleasure of the party to go much farther. As it was, a fog was forming, and they would not reach home till 8 o'clock.

But it was all very cheerful, and Helena and Maxwell and two or three other pairs of lovers had nooks to themselves and would have liked it to continue indefinitely.

Miss Martha had been prominent all day with the congregation. Then her class had given her much to do, it being of boys many of whose parents had not come, but entrusted their children to her care.

teachers' meeting for discussion. Rev. Frederic Newport, pastor of Oxford Congregational church, thinks that it is well to follow the questions in the lesson sheet, as it does not discourage the dull scholars, but didn't want a teacher slavishly confined to those printed ideas of somebody else; better have a few ideas of one's own and get up a discussion. Mrs. Wm. E. Brooks of South Paris gave an opinion that severe measures are sometimes necessary in enforcing Sabbath school discipline and gave an instance in her own experience where coercion worked well. Mrs. Abel W. Pottle of South Paris urged the teachers' duty to present the claims of Christ as a personal Savior at every opportunity time. Rev. William E. Brooks, D. D., pastor of South Paris Congregational church, said that the three essential qualifications for a teacher are thorough instruction, faith in the Word, and a burning passion for souls kept flaming by fire from the Holy Ghost. Mr. Halliday kept up a running fire of comments and in discussing teaching said that its purpose is to give understanding to others.

A bass solo, "Flee as a Bird," was given by Rev. Mr. Newport.

Mrs. Pottle's paper on increasing attendance urged every day personal work to that end, and then keeping an orderly interested Sunday school.

Rev. Mr. Rideout spoke on how to win and keep souls. He knows only one way, the same way used by Christ, to love them.

Mrs. Brooks wants a teacher to love her pupils and able to control them. A teacher not possessing those characteristics is a failure.

Mrs. Charles E. Tolman read a paper prepared by Ruby Clark of Bethel on "Personal work throughout the week."

The general discussion was participated in by Mr. Halliday, Rev. Dr. Brooks, Rev. Mr. Rideout, Rev. Mr. Pottle, Rev. T. J. Ramsdell of South Paris Baptist church, and Mrs. Bonney of South Paris. One church looks after the babies, keeps a cradle roll and gets them to Sunday school at an early age. Good idea to hold what you have, and a successful method with primary scholars is quarterly card certificates of attendance, etc., with marks for attendance on each Sabbath at church and Sabbath school, and also credits for contributions. The question of promotions from class to class was universally considered to be a question of expediency.

Mr. Halliday gave a little talk on "The Teacher's Perquisites." The first one is thorough dissatisfaction with the insufficiency of work done, both in quantity and quality. The second is opportunity to work. The third is reward in the friendship of scholars and companionship of the Master.

After a three-hour recess the evening session began.

The special music of the evening was an alto solo by Jessie Clare Tolman of South Paris.

Rev. Judson W. Shaw of Yarmouth, field secretary of the Young Citizens' Loyal League, gave an address on the duty of the church and Sabbath school workers in citizenship education—their need and method. It was a strong address on the need of Christian education for Christian citizenship. He made one interesting suggestion that in the teaching of nature studies which should be greatly increased, it would be well to direct the thoughts of the children from the created to the Creator. He wants the church to look after training the children so that they will gravitate naturally into the Christian life.

Next week, on account of the holiday, the ADVERTISER will go to press on Wednesday afternoon instead of Thursday afternoon as usual.

Our advertisers and our correspondents will please take notice, and get their copy to the printing office one day earlier than usual.

Correspondents are asked to tell us about any special plans for Fourth of July in their neighborhoods.

Charles H. Stevens of Andover has an increase of pension, $30.

The annual meeting of the Oxford County Medical Association will be held at Mechanic Falls, on Monday, July 1st, at 11 a. m. Business, election of officers. Papers, Dr. C. D. Hill, of Bethel, will present a paper upon the "Treatment of Abortion when Inevitable," and Dr. C. B. Sylvester, of Harrison, one upon "Toxic Food." After the papers, reports of interesting cases will be in order.

These be commencement days. A lot of youths and maidens are bidding farewell to the colleges. Throughout the summer they will enjoy a sensation of possessing degrees of their own. The great disillusion will come in the fall when the boys will go out into the cold, cold world. May the shock, when it comes, be no greater than they can bear. As for the girls, may the scholarship be no bar to matrimony. In other words, may they not be puffed up by the knowledge that they have more Greek and Latin and philosophy than most of their devoted admirers. Then all will be well.

Wednesday, the 19th, Judge Mattocks in the probate court in Portland was occupied in hearing the evidence and arguments in the petition of Lona M. Smith of Oxford, for the appointment of Quincy Millet of Oxford, as guardian of Elroy B. Frances, ten years old, the son of Harry Frances of Oxford, deceased. The petition was opposed by Levi Edwards of Otisfield, who has the child in his custody and who claims by virtue of the fact that he has cared for the child since the death of his parents, that he is entitled to retain the custody of the minor. H. M. Sylvester of Otisfield appeared for the remonstrants against the granting of the petition and George Hazen of Oxford for the petitioner.

The parade, this season, with the Walter L. Mac Shab, which exhibits at Lewiston, Me., on Wednesday, July 8, is especially noteworthy in that it contains more novelties than ever before, notably the Zouave Drum Corps, a troop of performing elephants, and an ancient historical Quebec Calash, properly contended. The parade is said to be of unusual length and brilliancy, and worth going miles to witness. It will leave the show grounds at 10 o'clock a. m. A free exhibition will be given at the show grounds after the return of the parade. In order to give all a chance to see the grand exhibition of the "Congress of Nations" in the Menagerie tent the doors will be open at 1 and 7 o'clock p. m. The show will be at 10 o'clock p. m.

Reunion of Co. H, 17th Maine Reg.

In the pleasant parlor of the bride's sister, Mrs. Martha Sawin, which had been prettily decorated for the occasion with flowers and evergreen in which was suspended a bell of pansies and other flowers, stood the happy pair, while the solemn words were said which bound them together for weal or woe. Always a good time with Ariel and Cal. Coming home, Friday, a little after noon, starting and trying to keep cool, a neighbor remarked, "Come, let's go into court." A court! Who, or what? "Oh, the Robinsons." Up we go to Fred Dyer's office, coatless, thinly clad withal. Instead of finding a court of the usual order before trial justice Parsons, engineered by Tom and Fred, we were greatly taken back on being ushered into the presence of such an august body as their confronted us. There sat a man as referee, said to be A. S. Kimball, esq., of Norway. Used to know him by sight away back in the days of "Oon-fusion," but the years that have intervened have got in their work, with the added dignity of the occasion placing him beyond the ken of the writer. Then there was J. S. Wright, esq., of South Paris, not looking a day older (to my defective vision) than when he appeared as counsel for the defense, State vs. Russell over at Labrador more than twenty-five years ago. Here is the difference between the two. The one may have been a martyr, so to speak, while the other may have always "looked after the main chance."

Now for the question. As a Robinson, 2d, sues the wife of his brother Alvin for services rendered by a minor son. Mrs. Robinson and her sister, Addie Heald, hold a deed of the farm, hence Mrs. Robinson was sued for the services of the boy, though the services were ostensibly for Alvin Robinson, without contract or price stated. Fred Dyer for plaintiff, J. S. Wright for defendant.

The case became of so much interest that we forgot our insignificance, stayed and absorbed the legal squabble, which at times became interesting and somewhat pugilistic.

At the summing up, counsel for the defense stated that he should say but little compared with what would be called for before a jury, considering the court's knowledge of legal points. Doubtless from force of habit he forgot himself for he left no points uncovered. Never before having listened to a plea by the young attorney, and commencing with an apology for the lack of experience and knowledge of the law of his eminent brother, he started in, scored well, and to say the least he came out neck and neck with his antagonist.

Not having been in attendance at the morning session, we withheld our decision.

That Paris Library.

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER:

I noticed in last week's issue of the Democrat a proposition to call a town meeting of the people of Paris to see if they would vote $300 for a library on the lot owned by J. Frank Howland of Boston, which is situated on the corner of the lot owned by Mountain View Stock Farm, and has been offered to the town by Mr. Howland. I am glad to see that the town is so interested in the subject of a library, and I am sure that the people of Paris will vote for it.

Mr. Howland's offer is a very generous one, and it is to be hoped that the town will accept it. The library would be a great benefit to the people of Paris, and it is to be hoped that the town will accept it.

was $1,263,450, of which sum $400 would mean a tax of three and one-third cents on $100 of valuation. Perhaps that additional tax might prove the straw that broke the camel's back, but it is not certain.

Again, the gentleman who wrote the above letter is in error as to Mr. Howland's offer. While not stated explicitly, yet it was made with the understanding that the library should be at South Paris. The offer was made to the town and not to South Paris village. The town is indeed fortunate in having an opportunity of securing such a library in a location so near the center of population within its borders. And to have it so there will be no need of paying rent.

And the prospect is that as the years go by out to convenience of the patrons, and nearness to where most of the taxes are paid, South Paris will become more and more the ideal location for a Paris town library.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.

The Fourteenth Annual Convention of Oxford County W. C. T. U.

Tuesday morning, June 18, dawned just right to tempt the housewife, who had been perplexed with the difficulties of house-clearing, to make little openings in the White Ribbons of Oxford county were on business intent as the time had come for summing up the year's work and planning for future efforts.

The picturesque little village of Buckfield put on her best dress of June green and gave a smile of welcome to the visitors who were warmly greeted by members of the local Union as the train arrived. The Methodist church had been beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the out flowers and potted plants gave their share in the welcome.

The convention opened with devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. Nellie Burger of Missouri, and from her words and prayer every heart got an uplift and courage for the work. After the close of this service the president, Mrs. Martha Chapman, took the chair and declared the convention open for business.

Roll call of officers, appointment of committees and report of the conference session followed by a most cordial address of welcome by Mrs. Clara Withington, and Maria Irish responded as heartily in behalf of the different Unions represented.

Noiside prayer at the conference session in order, when the visitors received a hearty hospitality in the homes of the Buckfield ladies. One of the pleasing features of the morning was the presentation of delegates from the new Union just formed at Buckfield, and a hearty welcome was accorded this Union of forty-one members.

The afternoon session was full to the brim of good things until one wondered if anything would be left for the program of the second day.

Major G. A. Hastings of Bethel was in town, Saturday, on business.

Mrs. Frank E. DeCoster and baby Adeline are visiting her sister, Mrs. Eugene E. Flood, at Farmington.

All the ladies, instead of teachers, who go to the box supper on Pike's Hill, Friday evening, are to bring boxes.

Eva May Tibbets, daughter of C. C. Tibbets of Waterville, formerly of Norway, graduated from the Waterville High School in the scientific course, last week.

Agnes E. Sanborn graduated from Gorham normal school, last week, having completed the two-year course. An unusual circumstance was there being only one from Oxford county in the class.

Hazelhurst, overlooking Lake Pennesseewassee, formerly owned and built by Dr. Hazell, with all modern improvements, will be sold at public auction, June 29, at 2 p. m. For particulars see adv. in another column.

Elmer Ingalls and Ben Aldrich up Sunday River, Riley Plantation, were in town, last week, to buy a horse. They report that there were eleven fishermen on the river, one day the week before. How many fish were caught they did not say, but it is safe to presume that some were got.

Twitchell Brothers of Oxford have leased a store at Old Orchard and will run a fruit stand there during the summer, in addition to their regular business of peddling. They are planning to take advantage of the big time at the fair grounds, July 4th, and open their restaurant on the grounds.

Duffy's Jubilee, at the opera house, Thursday evening, June 20, was the liveliest show that has entertained Norwegians for a long time. There was something doing continually for two and a half hours. The show is given in three acts and is a far more interesting order. The story is of two men who innocently pay some attention to a woman who happens to be an actress and then try to live out of it when the wife of one and the sweetheart of the other ask questions. Of course they get mixed up in their falsehoods, and a tremendous family row results. The acting was good and active—no slow folks or sticks in that troupe of a dozen performers. During the performance sixteen specialties of various kinds were introduced and all were of the kind to go well with the rest of the evening's fun.

Sunday was children's day at the Congregational church. At the morning service the children were seated by Sabbath school classes to listen to the sermon by the pastor, Rev. Bates S. Rideout. It was from Matt. 23. "The children that were crying in the temple and saying Hosanna to the son of David." In the evening a concert was given by a chorus of twenty-five children including a few of the larger girls. It was in reality a children's concert. To be sure, Mrs. Horne played the accompaniments and Miss Staples assisted them with a solo, but it was a children's concert and the fresh clear sweet young voices gave the audience such delight as they seldom get. The children did their individual work well; the chorus was every member eager for the singing, and while not allowed to strain their voices yet they put into the singing a vim and joyousness that delighted every one of us. We give the program:

Letter to Charles P. Barnes, Norway, Me.

Dear Sir: H. M. Hooker & Co., Cooperstown, N. Y., have sold Devoe paint for 42 years. D. T. McGown, of that firm, built a house in '85 and painted Devoe, of course. The paint lasted ten years.

A year or two later, a neighbor built a house, and painted it lead and oil. The neighbor's house was repainted twice in the same time.

This looks as if the neighbor's house was painted three times in eight or nine years, and McGown's once in ten years. We are not quite sure—we tell the tale as it comes to us.

It is enough to say that Devoe lead and zinc lasts twice as long as lead and oil.

Yours truly,
F. W. Devoe & Co.
P. S.—F. P. Stone sells our paint in your section.

Jacobus-Chapman.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Chalmers Chapman, Bethel, was solemnized, Wednesday, the 19th, at high noon, the marriage of their daughter, Marion Elise, to George Jacobus of Garden City, N. Y., by Rev. Arthur Varley of Bethel. The ceremony was performed under a bower of roses and evergreens, and the delicious perfume of the fresh honey-suckle blossoms filled the rooms and hallway.

The maid of honor, sister of the bride, was Cecile F. Chapman dressed in pink. The bridesmaids, dressed in white over pink, were Lotta T. Proctor of Waterville, Alice Barker, E. Louise Jacobus of Springfield, Mass., Margaret G. Thurston of Portland and Christine L. Chapman. The best man was Hannibal H. Hamlin, brother of the bride. The ushers were E. P. Fay of Springfield, Mass., Emory H. Sykes of Auburn, Granville A. Chapman, C. S. Jacobus of Springfield, Mass., and C. A. Kimball of Littleton, Mass., a Yale classmate of the groom.

The wedding march of Mendelssohn was played as they passed from the upper hallway. The bride was given away by her father and the Episcopal service with ring was used. The groom's present to the bride was a sun burst pin of pearls around a diamond center. The bride's presents to the maid were four leaf clover gold pins, while the ushers received from the groom gold stick pins with gold knot and pearl centre. Only relatives and most intimate friends were present. But the deep interest of a large circle of acquaintances from near and far was clearly manifested by the large number of simply elegant and varied presents that lent additional charm and beauty.

After a wedding trip of several weeks and a sojourn at the sea shore, their future home will be in their newly built residence at Garden City, N. Y.

Camp Sunset, Greenwood.

This camp was built in the fall of 1899 on the shores of Hill pond near the road and a little way below Martin's. A good stable with four stalls has been built.

The owners of the camp are H. F. Richardson, C. H. Seavey, Harry F. Wood and Asa Richardson of Norway and Edward E. Packard of Greenwood.

There is good trout fishing in the immediate vicinity and the pickering fishing in the pond is unsurpassed, occasionally a four-pounder being taken. The water has been stocked with salmon.

Recently H. F. Richardson and friends visited camp and caught 15 trout, one of which weighed 1½ pounds, and 17 pickering were caught.

Visits His Native Town.

"My last visit to Maine was 25 years ago," said Senator Paris Gibson of Montana to a newspaper man after he had explained the objects of his present visit. "Last Saturday, I arrived in Brownfield. Very few of my old friends are now living. I went to Fryeburg and North Conway and also saw a few people whom I once knew. There is a marked change in these towns which has been produced on account of the tourist travel. What particularly attracted my notice was the rapid growth of trees of all kinds and I have been perhaps as much impressed with that as anything that I have seen. The pastures of my boyhood are now covered with thick forests. The lumber business in Maine will always be a great and profitable industry. All of the country between Portland and the White Mountains is one great growing forest, and the rapidity with which the trees grow surprises me."

A successful session of school closed, last Friday, in No. 8. The relations of teacher and pupils seem to have been more than usually cordial of late and the teacher, Blanche Day of Stow, will be warmly welcomed on her return after the summer vacation. On the closing day, each of the scholars was given a handsome souvenir card, or rather, two cards stamped by a knot of ribbon, one containing the name of the school and teacher with the date and the names in full of all the scholars. It is easy to imagine the emotions this dainty souvenir shall arouse after forty or fifty years of life's changes when they recall their inevitable separations shall run their course, and the closing day of a pleasant and profitable term of school should be suggested by it always.

He was aged 64 years and 20 days, having been born in Woodstock in 1837. He was the son of Alexander and Eliza (Ricker) Day. With the exception of a short time in the West he always lived in Woodstock. He was a cattle dealer, wool buyer and butcher and was a successful business man.

Religiously he was interested in the welfare of the Universalist church. Politically he was from boyhood an ardent Republican and was influential in the councils of his party. He never sought office, yet his love for law and order was strong enough so that he was persuaded to serve eleven years as deputy sheriff.

Mr. Day was twice married. His first wife, Maria G. Farnham of Rumford. His second wife, Lizzie A. Gilbert of Lawrence, Mass., survives. He also left one son, a boy of 19 years.

Children's Sunday, last Sunday, at the Congregational church. The children were furnished with flowers, which were handsomely trimmed with potted plants, ferns and flowers. Much credit is due the North Waterford day teachers and Mrs. Gilpatrick for conducting and managing things so well, also to the music furnished by Fred Saunders, organist; Addison Holt, trombone; Mrs. Fred Saunders, accompanist.

Children's Day.
The bright eager faces of the Sunday school children of North Waterford made the church look like a garden on Sunday morning, June 23. The church was tastefully decorated by the young ladies of the school, the young men lending their assistance in gathering evergreen and flowers. A thick background of evergreen provided a delightful contrast to the light dresses of the children when on the platform. At the back and sides was a low bank of flowers, while above their heads swung a basket of daisies. The columns on either side were wound with evergreen and daisy braids. The organ was converted into a mass of flowers.

The occasion was the observance of Children's day which had been postponed on this date so that wild flowers could be seen in the decorations. Under the direction of their superintendent, Mrs. Gilpatrick, and her able corps of helpers, a carol service "Looking Forward" had been prepared. Forty-six children from the vestry, marched into the church from the center aisle, separated in front of the altar, then marched back to the rear by the side aisles then down the center aisle to their places in the center pews. Then followed songs, recitation and concert exercises such as children love. Every child did its part well even to the young misses who received the offering.

It would be interesting to know the kind of grass.

Bridgton Academy seems likely to have an unusually large number of scholars from Harrison at the last term, as the town at its last annual meeting raised money to pay the tuition of scholars at the academy instead of maintaining a high school in town.
